But, Mr. Hoag contends, the system must be applied to the election of at least one entire chamber of the Porto Rico legislature before it can be expected to give satisfactory results. The proposed non-transferable balloting also has other defects, as compared with the Hare system, which are set forth in the April number of the Proportional Representation Review. A WARTIME BIT FOR THE FEEBLEMINDED TRAINING the feebleminded to useful labor is an important element in their institutional education. An opportunity for the spread of an interesting experiment in this field is believed by many institutional superintendents to be afforded by the present demand for an extension in farming operations to increase the food supply. For several years Rome State Custodial Asylum, a state institution for the feebleminded at Rome, N. Y., has trained its better grade boys and men to become farmers and has put colonies of them on owned and rented farms in the neighborhood of the institution, under the supervision of a normal man and wife who know farming. The first of these farm colonies was established ten years ago. Since then six others have been acquired, four of which are owned and three rented. Each has a colony of twenty inmates with a man and woman in charge. All the work is done by the boys and the two employed people. Today the institution is operating 1,200 acres of land, 600...
