Not illustrated. 1889 Excerpt: . . . discomfort being the necessity of fording the ice-cold and very swift water several times en route. Spring travel. Id the early summer, when the valleys on both sides of the summit are deeply filled with hard snow for a number of miles, the Indians secure a less abrupt grade (particularly on the south slope) by travelling on the snow and altogether avoiding the rough sides of the valley. This was the state of the pass when Mr. Ogilvie made his way inland over it, in June. Its greatest difficulty was found in connection with the Indians, who are untrustworthy and extortionate to a degree. He and his men were in consequence obliged to pack over a great part of their stuff themselves, and in so doing most of the party became snowblind. He had with him two Peterborough boats, intended for use in his survey, and in safely transporting them across the Coast Ranges, accomplished a feat hitherto not attempted. Rocks. The rocks met with on the Chilkoot Pass are practically all granites generally hornblendic and grey, though varying in coarseness of grain, and often porphyritic with pink orthoclase. The granite is cut in places by dark grey-green dykes, probably diabase. Near the actual summit it assumes a brecciated or shattered appearance, and here a considerable mass of coarse, black, and probably intrusive diorite occurs. In the valley south of the summit similar granites prevail, but in some places include rocks with pretty evident gneissic lamination,...
