Excerpt: . had but two brief and inconsiderable attacks of the pain. This is not the only case, within my own practice, in which the arsenical solution has been attended with success; but in consequence of the injurious effect which this medicine often produces on the stomach, and on the nervous system in general, I should certainly never have recourse to it until the other remedies which have been recommended had been tried, and repeatedly tried, without avail. OF LOCAL NEURALGIA. The cases which I have already given, in the course of the work, of painful affections produced by local irritating causes, such as the pressure of a portion of gold upon the nerve of a tooth which had been filled--or of exostosis at the extremity of the root--will at once illustrate the interest which this disorder possesses in relation to the diseases of the...
